The legislation would have a disparate impact on the online industry. Second, I am concerned about limiting general privacy legislation to online practices. Whatever the potential of the Internet, most observers recognize that information collection today is also widespread offline. Legislation subjecting one set of competitors to different rules, simply based on the medium used to collect the information, appears discriminatory. Indeed the sources of information that lead to our number one privacy complaint - ID Theft - are frequently offline. Of course, applying the legislation offline would increase the complexity of implementation, again under-scoring the difficulties inherent in general privacy legislation. 3. We have insufficient information about costs and benefits. Third, although we know consumers value their privacy, we know little about the cost of online privacy legislation to consumers or the online industry. Again, the experience under GLB indicates that the costs of notice alone can be substantial. Under S. 2201, these costs may be increased by the greater number of businesses that must comply, by uncertainty over which set of consent procedures apply, and by the difficulty of implementing access and security provisions. 4. Rapid evolution of online industry and privacy programs is continuing. Fourth, the online industry is continuing to evolve rapidly. Recent surveys show continued progress in providing privacy protection to consumers. Almost all (93 percent) of the most popular websites provide consumers with notice and choice regarding sharing...
