XXX Unless we have learned, in the language of our nation, to hitch our wagon to a star --unless we have developed and educated an imaginative faculty which will kindle our work with emotion and faith, our labor will be both irksome and fruitless. For if it be true that faith without works is dead, it is much truer that works without faith are deader. You who stand by the sick-bed, and by virtue of your scientific skill bid disease be health, and death be life--unless your work speaks to you of that splendid unity of idea of the Man who said, What matter whether I say to thee, Thy sins be forgiven thee, or Take up thy bed and walk ?, you may save your patient s life, but you will not thereby move yourselves much nearer the kingdom of heaven. You who follow the courses of the planets and the cycles of the suns--unless you divine in your work the music of the spheres, and in some fashion translate it into your work, jou may add to the world s knowledge, but not to its joys and its inspirations. You who draw and paint, discerning the delicate play of light and shade in the infinite scale--unless your subject shall be illumined with the light that never was, on sea (- land, your pictures may hang in the academy, but they will never reach and influence...
