But howsoever I would fain known how any discreet moderate man dares say, that the placing of the Holy Table altarwise (since they will needs call it so) is done either to advance or usher in popery For, did Queen Elizabeth banish popery, and yet did she all along her reign, from first to last, leave the Communion-table so standing in her own chapel royal in S. Pauls and Westminster, and other places; and all this of purpose to advance or usher in that popery which she had driven out And since her death have two gracious kings kept out popery all their times, and yet left the Holy Table standing as it did in the Queens time, and all of purpose to advance or usher in popery which they kept out Or whats the matter May the Holy Table stand this way in the Kings chapel or cathedral, or Bishops chapels, and not elsewhere Surely, if it be decent and fit for Gods service, it may stand so (if authority please) in any church. But if it advance or usher in any superstition and popery, it ought to stand so in none. Nor hath any Kings chapel any prerogative (if that may be called one) above any ordinary church to disservo God in, by any superstitious rites Secondly, this appears by the canon or rule of the Church of England too, for tis plain by the last injunction of the Queen, that the...
