It is my living sentiment, and by the blessing of God it shall be my dying sentiment--independence now, and independence forever! The integrity and independence of our country are again in peril, and to-day the issue is with us. We come together now, not, as in past years, to rejoice over a national domain boundless in extent, peopled by countrymen differing in their views and institutions, but united in loyalty and affection, at peace in their own borders, and with the great arm of the Union protecting its citizens alike on sea or land, at home or in foreign climes. But we meet in sadness to overlook a divided nation, and to listen to the tramp of martial forces larger than ever before trod the soil of America: the one army bearing proudly aloft the stars and stripes, and keeping step to the music of the Union; the other grasping the banner of rebellion and the black flag of piracy, proclaiming death to the constitution and the Union, and ruin to the commerce of the republic. To meet the rebel force arrayed against the capital, President Lincoln has called upon the loyal states, and at the word, fresh from the plough, the loom and the workshop, fresh from college seats and the professor's chair, from the bar, the pulpit, and the counting-house, fresh from every department of American industry, the army of the Union...
